

Social and Personal

Temple Beth Ahaba presented a beautiful scene at 8 o'clock last evening as it appeared for the nuptial celebration of Miss Emily Raab and Mr. Adolph Hammel.

The work of decoration was done by Hammond, and in every particular emphasized the idea of the bride's preference in a white wedding. A background and canopy of graceful southern smilax at the altar threw into sharp relief the white roses massed in the wreathing of white candles, crowned with white waxen tapers. From the canopy depended a lovely large floral form of white anemones and lilies of the valley.

White lilies against a grouping of palms filled the entire altar space, while, with the aisle, was covered in white. The main aisle was arched at intervals from entrance to altar with sprays of tulips and white carnations, held in place by true lovers' knots of white tulle.

Mr. Reinhardt, at the organ, rendered the processional and recessional wedding marches.

The bride walked to the altar with her father, Mr. Emanuel Raab. She was exquisitely gowned in white liberty satin, richly embroidered with rose point lace. Her veil was held with a coronet of orange blossoms, and she bore on her arm a graceful shower of white violets and lilies of the valley.

The groom was attended by his best man, Mr. Benjamin Kraft, of New York. The groom, the best man and groomsmen had boutonnieres of white violets. The ceremony was impressively performed by the Rev. Dr. Edward N. Calisch. Mrs. Augustus Ullman, of Chicago, the sister of the bride, as matron of honor, was extremely handsome in white lace above chiffon and satin, with lilies of the valley in silver. Her flowers were white lilies. The bridesmaids, Miss Edna Stern, of Chicago; Miss Rose Wechsler, of New York; Miss Mabel and Miss Bita Syde, of Richmond, wore dainty white frocks of French mull and valenciennes lace, with skilful touches of green. They carried bouquets of white roses and maidenhair ferns. The bridesmaids were presented by the bride with lovely pins, showing a miniature Cupid encircled with pearls.

Mr. Henry Hunter, Dr. Moses Syde, Mr. Henry Syde, Mr. Milton Binswanger and Mr. Milton J. Straus officiated as groomsmen. The gift of the grooms to them; and to the best man took the form of gold chains with gold buckles.

After the ceremony an elegant reception was held at the Masonic Temple, where the wedding supper was also served. Mr. Henry Hunter was master of ceremonies and presided in a most happy manner. The toilets worn at the reception gave a brilliant appearance to the assembly hall, which was lavishly adorned with Hammond's palms and emulax, Kaufmann's orchestra played a selection of appropriate and pleasing airs.

Mrs. Emanuel Raab, the mother of the bride, was in white elan lace and chiffon, embroidered in sequins. Her ornaments were diamonds. The bride's aunt, Mrs. Julia Raab, in an imported toilet of opalescent brocade and hand-painted lace, worn with diamonds and opals.

Mrs. Henry Stern, in a black embroidered lace robe, chiffon, velvet applique, diamonds. Mrs. Samuel Stern, in black embroidered silk net, sequin fringe, and girde; sapphires and diamonds. Mrs. Henry Hammel, the groom's mother, in champagne peau de cygne, with pearls and insets of Irish point lace, diamonds.

Mrs. L. Hammel, in white herse lace, with accordion platings of chiffon and crush girde of white chiffon velvet; opals.

Mrs. Mier, in white silk net, embroidered in pearls outlined with silver; sequin fringe; pearls.

Mrs. Cary, in a clinging gown of soft white silk, point lace, pearl embroidery. Mrs. Massman, in a lovely black and white toilet, with embroidered chiffon and lace; diamonds.

Mrs. Stumer, in champagne colored chiffon, with medallions of lace and accordion platings; topaz ornaments.

Mrs. Harry Weller, in white liberty satin, rose point lace, and diamonds.

Mrs. Milton Florenheim, in a handsome gown of Irish point lace; pearls.

Mrs. Mark, in a handsome silk net robe, embroidered in sequins; diamond ornaments.

Mrs. Isadora Strause, in white crepe de chine, with trimmings of lace and chiffon.

Mrs. William Nelson, in pale blue crepe de chine, with hand-embroidery and white lace.

Mrs. Simon Syde, in elegant imported black lace robe, embroidered in jet; diamonds.

Mrs. Elgenbrum, in white elan lace, with pearl embroidery and pearl ornaments; diamonds.

Mrs. Florence Thalheimer, in black embroidered net, worn above white silk, sequin fringe; diamonds.

In the supper hall, palms alternated with white cyclamen and Southern smilax. The bride's table had twenty-six covers laid. The bride cake, a triumph of culinary art, occupied the place of honor in the center, and plaques of white blue and lilies of the valley were placed at each end. The eight tables of long guests were seated both ways of long-stemmed golden-gate roses.

In the parlors of the Raab home, No. 20 West Franklin Street, a beautiful and costly array of bridal gifts in choice of glass, silver, china, Oriental rugs, pictures and bric-a-brac were displayed, not to mention several magnificent checks which were bestowed upon the young couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Hammel will take an extensive bridal tour, including a visit to Washington and New Orleans, and a stay for some weeks in California. They will return from the last mentioned point to Chicago, where they will have their home and where Mr. Hammel has a fine social position, and flourishing business connections. Miss Raab's many friends in Richmond will greatly regret the fact that her marriage will result in her removal to another city than this, where she has always lived, and where she has always been held in the highest esteem and admiration.

Beware of Substitution.

Owing to the wonderful popularity which JELL-O has attained since its introduction, many inferior imitations have been placed on the market by unscrupulous manufacturers, who hope to make a profit from their goods sold in competition with JELL-O on the strength of our extensive advertising.

Beware of the grocer who tries to sell you something else, claiming it is "just as good" as JELL-O. No honest grocer will offer to substitute for JELL-O. JELL-O is sold and used more extensively throughout the world than any other food product.

Cato's Soliloquy.

By JOSEPH ADDISON.

Joseph Addison was born at Milston, Wilts, Eng., May 1, 1672, and died at Holland House, London, June 17, 1719. He was the son of a statesman; was educated at Oxford; was under Secretary of State in 1704; secretary of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in 1715; Commissioner for Trade, and the Colonies 1716; Secretary of State 1717-18. In 1719 he married the Countess of Warwick. He is best known for his prose contributions to the Tatler and Spectator, for his tragedy, Cato, from which the accompanying extract is taken.

Marcus Porcius Cato was born in Rome, 95, B. C., and died at Utica, 46, B. C. He took sides with Pompey against Caesar. After Pompey's defeat Cato committed suicide. "These two famous lines, generally supposed to be a part of Addison's Cato, were composed by Jonathan M. Sewall for a presentation at Portsmouth, N. H.:—

IT MUST be so—Plato, thou reason'st well—Else whence this pleasing hope, this fond desire, This longing after immortality? Or whence this secret dread, and inward horror Of falling into naught? Why shrinks the Soul Back on herself, and startles at destruction? 'Tis the Divinity, that stirs within us; 'Tis Heav'n itself, that points out a hereafter, And intimates eternity to man. Eternity! thou pleasing, dreadful thought! Through what variety of untried being, Through what new scenes and changes must we pass! The wide, the unbounded prospect lies before me; But shadows, clouds, and darkness rest upon it. Here will I hold, if there's a power above us, (And that there is, all Nature cries aloud Through all her works,) he must delight in virtue; And that which he delights in must be happy. But when or where?—This world was made for Caesar. I'm weary of conjectures—this must end.

(Laying his hand upon his sword)

"Thus am I doubly arm'd—My death and life, My bane and antidote are both before me. This in a moment brings me to an end; But this informs me I shall never die. The Soul, secured in her existence, smiles At the drawn dagger, and defies its point. The stars shall fade away, the Sun himself Grow dim with age, and Nature sink in years; But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth, Unhurt amidst the war of elements, The wreck of matter and the crash of worlds."

Crenshaw—McCarthy.

The marriage of Miss Ida Gray McCarthy to Mr. Ellis Crenshaw took place at 8 o'clock last evening in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton McCarthy, of Park Avenue.

The parlors were prettily decorated with palms and an altar was erected in the front parlor, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. J. Hays.

Mr. Crenshaw was best man. The bride, who entered with her father, was preceded to the altar by her maid of honor, Miss Ida Christian.

A number of friends and relatives witnessed the marriage and offered their congratulations afterward. Mr. and Mrs. Crenshaw will return from their wedding trip to make their home at No. 92 East Clay Street.

BLACKBURN AFTER WOOD TWO HOURS

"President's Pet" Again Bone of Contention in the United States Senate.

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, March 16.—Another on the day of the Senate was devoted to the nomination of General Leonard Wood to be a major-general.

Senator Blackburn took the floor, resuming his speech begun yesterday. He occupied a little more than two hours, and was followed by Senator Quarles, who consumed the balance of the day, the speech of the latter being heard to-morrow. Mr. Blackburn commented at length on the charges. It is predicted now that a vote will be reached before adjournment Friday.

In addition to the set speeches, which will be made by Senators Teller and Foraker, Senator Alger, formerly Secretary of War, will take fifteen or twenty minutes in defense of General Wood's executive ability. He will speak from a personal point of view.

OLD VIRGINIA WAR RECORDS

is charged with the duty of collecting "all military rolls, records and other materials showing the officers and enlisted men of the several companies, battalions, regiments and other military organizations from Virginia in the armies of the Confederate States, and the names of all Virginians of whatever rank, in the military, marine or naval service of the Confederate States, whether regulars, volunteers, militia or reserve."

HOW TO WORK.

Having been honored with this appointment, I enter upon its arduous duties with an earnest appeal to my surviving daughters of those whose names, sons and comrades, and to those whose memories we hold dear, for their zealous co-operation, both in their individual and organized capacities, in order that this laudable work may be worthily done, and a complete and enduring record secured. Without their help only partial success can be achieved, and names will escape which the State would not willingly let die. The time is limited in which our State can avail itself of the provision made by the United States to publish these records. It is therefore imperative that the records referred to should be gathered without delay and forwarded to my address in the care of the State Librarian, Richmond, Va.

All muster rolls, records and other materials which will be turned over to the State Librarian, who will transmit them to the War Department, to be copied and used in the preparation of the roster above referred to, in so far as needed for that purpose, with the understanding that the State of Virginia alike that they shall be returned, when copied, to the State Librarian, or to the owner, as the Librarian may direct.

I also specially invoke the earnest and effective co-operation of the various camps of Confederate Veterans, Chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the Confederate Memorial Literary Society and other historical societies, and the newspapers throughout Virginia and West Virginia, in this important work.

(Signed) ROBERT W. HUNTER.

Secretary of Virginia Military Records.

THE JENNINGS BILL.

This work was instituted and the new office of secretary of Virginia military records was created by act of the Legislature, which has just adjourned. The bill, known as the "Jennings bill," Representative Jennings, of Lynchburg, having introduced it in the House, providing for this work, met with little or no opposition in either branch of the Legislature. The law, for the Jennings bill, now the law of the Commonwealth, is an interesting one, and should be read by every old Confederate and every lover of the old soldiers. It is here given in full as it passed:

Whereas the Congress of the United States has provided that "a complete roster of the officers and enlisted men of the Union and Confederate armies" shall be made under the direction of the Secretary of War; and

Whereas the Secretary of War has applied to the State of Virginia to aid him in his work by furnishing such rolls, records and other materials as would show the names and numbers of the troops furnished by Virginia to the Confederate army; which request the Governor has been enabled to comply with only to a very limited extent; and

Whereas the soldiers sent by Virginia to the Confederate army obeyed the command of their State and made a record of which we are proud and which the State desires to preserve with their names and their history; therefore,

5. By reason of the facts set forth in the preamble of this act, there is an emergency that demands its immediate operation, and the same shall be in force from its passage.

Major Robert W. Hunter, of Winchester, was appointed some time ago by Governor Montague to be the first secretary of Virginia Military Records, under the law above printed. The appointment was made upon the recommendation of Judge George I. Christian, commander of the Grand Camp, Confederate Veterans of Virginia. The recommendation and appointment of Major Hunter was urged by General W. H. Payne, Bppa Hunton, Theo. S. Garnett, Fitz Lee, Marcus J. Wright, Colonel Archer Anderson and W. E. Cutshaw, Major Holmes Conrad and many others, all of whom recognized in Major Hunter the best man in Virginia for the place. General Wright urged the appointment, because of his experience the major has had in the government records department and his consequent familiarity with the war papers.

Major Robert W. Hunter was born in Berkeley county, Va. (now West Virginia), and was the son of Edmund and Platon Hunter, who in his day was recognized as the leading lawyer of the Lower Valley. Major Hunter's uncle, Andrew Hunter, was a famous criminal lawyer, and was appointed by Governor Wise as a special attorney of the State to assist in the prosecution of John Brown, of Harper's Ferry insurrection fame.

The subject of this sketch was educated at the University of Virginia, graduating from that institution in 1856. Among his classmates were Colonel Archer Anderson, Professor Thomas R. Price, Captain Gordon McCabe and others, whose names are household words in Virginia.

EARLY TO THE FRONT.

Major Hunter served on General Johnston's staff until the battle of Spotsylvania, on the 12th of May, 1864, when he was made adjutant-general of John B. Gordon's division, and became a general in the Confederate army. He served as such and fought side by side with the great Gordon until the sun of the loved Confederacy went down at Appomattox. This simple story of his career and his rapid promotion tells what manner of soldier Major Hunter was, and it is unnecessary to go into further details. In General Gordon's book, recently published, Major Hunter's name appears many times, and General Gordon pays merited tribute to the bravery, intelligence and energy of his devoted chief of staff.

At the close of the war, Major Hunter moved to Winchester, which has since been his home. He entered upon the practice of law, building up a lucrative business. While still practicing law he took a taste of journalism, becoming the editor of the Winchester Times, and his associates, the late Henry D. Beall, of the Baltimore Sun, and Captain Edward Hollis, made it a sparkling and successful paper.

In the 70's, Major Hunter represented Frederick county in the lower house of the Legislature, serving two terms consecutively.

Early in Mr. Cleveland's first term Major Hunter received the appointment to the office of inspector of the public land service. During Mr. Cleveland's second administration he filled the office of assistant United States attorney for the Interior Department. Subsequently, Major Hunter opened a law office in Washington and practiced also in the nearby Virginia courts. In Washington he confined his practice almost entirely to the Court of Claims.

Major Hunter is hale, hearty and vigorous, and he enters upon the discharge of the arduous duties, his new office imposes upon him with enthusiasm and with a real patriot's love for the good work.

His Richmond office is in the State Library. For a while he will necessarily have to maintain a branch office in Washington also.

NOT GOING ABROAD.

Report That President Stevens and Mr. Wickham Would Denied.

A rumor that President George W. Stevens, of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway, and Mr. Henry T. Wickham, general collector of that company, would leave to-day for a trip abroad falls of confirmation. From official sources it is ascertained that neither gentleman has any such intention. It was said that they had been invited to go to the sale or purchase by the Chesapeake and Ohio Steamship Company of the railway, or of the railway company by the steamship company.

It is also reported that the "State of Virginia would soon bring suit against the Pennsylvania Railway for acts in restraint of trade, or in violation of the interstate commerce laws, the alleged discrimination being against the coal and iron mines of Pennsylvania, and against the port of Newport News, the terminus of the steamship company, in the favor of the port of Philadelphia.

No information confirmatory of this rumor was gleaned from the attorney-general's office or elsewhere.

It was further stated yesterday that far from any discrimination against Virginia coal, new mines are being opened, and the law is now and has been for some time been making preparations to handle increased coal traffic. Only recently one thousand fifty-ton wagons were shipped from the State to the Chesapeake and Ohio by the Pressed Steel Car Company, and during the past two years several thousand new cars have been purchased for the use of the company's coal shipments from that point have not decreased, and no coal business there is being steadily enlarged and extended.
